ADA PROHIBITION DELEGATION

Mrs. J. H. Howerton, Rev. W. M. Wilson, R. E. Haynes and R. O. Wheeler, the Ada delegation who attended the State Anti-Saloon League meeting at Guthrie on Thursday, returned home today.

They first met with about 3,000 citizens in Oklahoma City, Wednesday night at the White Temple, and heard a fine talk by State Lecturer Baker.

At the meeting in Guthrie there was a large attendance of prohibitionists from all parts of the state and there was much enthusiasm.

ANOTHER EARTHQUAKE SHOCK.

Several Villages Wiped Out and Hundreds of People Killed.

Tangier, Jan. 21.—A landslide following a severe earthquake shock in the region south of Tetuan has wiped out several villages.

It is reported that hundreds of people were killed or injured.

THE STATE INSTITUTIONS

An Omnibus Bill That Will Provide For Their Location is Being Considered.

Guthrie, Okla., Jan. 21.—New State institutions that the house will recommend are to be reported in an omnibus bill, which the committee began considering tonight. It will be arranged that all delegations here to urge their towns for locations will be heard. The senate committee has held no meeting, although practically all the house bills are duplicated on its calendar.

In the house today Mr. Moore of Washington presented a bill giving Dewey the Northwestern State Normal, which insures that it will have the support of Bartlesville, heretofore an active candidate for the school.

A contest is brewing between Muskogee and Tahlequah for the same institution. Gov. Haskell favors Tahlequah, and recently sent a message to the legislature telling how much the Cherokees would take for their female seminary, which could easily be converted into a public institution. Muskogee policy as to a state institution appears to be unsettled. First it wanted the Connor's District Agricultural School that went to Warner, in the same county. Later, representatives came, proposing upon recommendation promised from the state department or education to take the state school for the blind, now located at Fort Gibson, and which is was the policy of the department to move.

The latest announcement is that a delegation will be here urging location of the Normal at Muskogee instead of at Tahlequah.

The Cordell bill, providing the procedure for probating wills, was passed finally by a vote of thirty-five to five.

The Landrum resolution for a bust of Sequoyah in statutory hall at Washington was passed without opposition.

The depositing of all public funds, by the state treasurer, public land commissioners, district, township or municipal treasurer, in banks guaranteed under the state guaranty fund is required in a bill introduced today by Senator R. E. Echols. The failure of an official to comply with the law is made a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of $200 to $1,000.

The new Roddie banking bill was under consideration for a short time during which the senate showed a disposition to cut several large holes in the measure. Roddie finally got through a motion to rise from committee of the whole, in which the bill was being considered, to save it from further mutilation. During that time, however, three amendments to the second section had been put through, cutting the minimum capital of banks in towns of less than 1,500 people from $15,000 to $10,000. In cities of 6,000 to 15,000 from $50,000 to $25,000; in cities of over 15,000 from $100,000 to $50,000. Senator Roddie gave notice on all three amendments that he would move to restore the original provisions on third reading.

$300 REWARD FOR PUTNAM'S SLAYER

Prosecuting Attorney Wimbish has received the following copy of the proclamation of Gov. Haskell, offering a reward of $300 for Marshal Zeke Putnam's slayer:

OKLAHOMA ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE IN CONVENTION

Guthrie, Okla., Jan. 21.—The Oklahoma Anti-Saloon League, in state convention here today, adopted resolutions declaring in favor of the state prohibition law, including the dispensary feature passed by the first legislature, interpreted by the supreme court of the state, and interpreting the recent vote on the dispensary system as not expressing the intention of the voters to repeal the dispensary system, but as opposing the extension of the local dispensaries to towns of less than 2,000 people as a constitutional amendment.

The portion of the resolution referring to the dispensary follows:

"We stand by our prohibition enforcement law, as enacted by the last legislature and recently interpreted by our supreme court. We believe that the vote in the recent election was not a disapproval of the agency system as provided by the constitution in towns of 2,000 population, but was an expression of the opposition of the people to amending the constitution so as to extend the system to smaller towns in violation of the conditions of the enabling act. Therefore we are opposed to any legislation that would curtail the right of a citizen to purchase liquors for bona fide medical or scientific purposes, as contemplated by the enabling act and in our constitution adopted by the people."

The Anti-Saloon League asks for the following amendments to the law: To give local authorities the right to suspend temporarily any officer who is charged with failure to discharge the duties of his office, pending a speedy trial of the charges, to authorize the governor to appoint a limited number of field marshals with powers of sheriffs to assist local authorities in the enforcement of the law, where their services are required, and to provide in each county for a deputy sheriff on a salary; to authorize county attorneys to employ an assistant to be paid by the county.

A law enforcement meeting is being held here tonight, Gov. Haskell and Rev. P. A. Baker, president of the National Anti-Saloon League, delivering the principal addresses.

USE CANNON TO CAP WELL.

Gas Has Been Burning for a Week and Roar Heard for Miles.

Tulsa, Okla., Jan. 21.—By using a cannon to shoot off the casing head and then capping the well with an immense iron head, effort will be made to extinguish the fire of the immense Fanchon gas well, six miles northwest of Skiatook in the Osage. This well caught fire a week ago, and efforts at putting out the blaze has proven unsatisfactory. The roar of the fire can be heard for miles, and at night the reflection can be seen for ten miles.

Plowed Up Counterfeit Money.

Tulsa, Okla., Jan. 21.—While plowing on his farm near Bixby, Walter Smith, a young farmer, turned up a tea kettle filled with counterfeit dollars dated 1897. It is believed that these coins were made by a gang of counterfeiters which operated in this section of Indian Territory about ten years ago.

MRS. OLIVE WHITTAKER DIES

Oklahoma City, Jan. 21.—Lingering between life and death for more than two months, Mrs. Olive Whitaker, who was shot down at Second and Robinson streets, November 22, by her husband, Grover C. Whitaker, died at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon at her cottage, 420 West Noble street.

Whitaker who is out on a $7,500 bond had not been located by the authorities. A report was received late last night stating he had been seen leaving town, going south and that he was bound for Ardmore, where he has relatives.

Immediately after receiving information that Mrs. Whitaker was dead, County Attorney Reardon swore out a warrant in Justice E. D. Oldfield's court charging Whitaker with murder. Officers throughout the city were notified to be on the lookout for him, but at a late hour last night he had not been arrested.

John Lane, charged originally with aiding and abetting in the escape of Grover C. Whitaker after the shooting of Mrs. Whitaker, was re-arrested last night on a new warrant charging him with being a principal in what is now termed the murder of Mrs. Whitaker.

WE WANT YOUR BUSINESS

"Spanking never stimulated a boy's conscience," says a magazine writer. Unanimous and concerted "O. K." from the juvenile contingent.—Hobart Republican.

But it accelerates the circulation of his blood and stimulates him to do what the fond parent with the slipper desires him to do.

Quite a number of new scholars have enrolled in the public schools this week. They are there because they have to be there. This is what is called "compulsory education." If you are between the ages of 8 and 16 your place is in the school room. The idea is to get an education whether you want it or not.—Konawa Chief-Leader.

Yes, that is part of the idea, and as property is taxed to support the schools without consulting the owner, it is just as well to force the children to go to school for at least three months of the year, without consulting their parents or guardians.

STATE CAPITAL LETTER.

Guthrie, Okla., Jan. 21.—The lower house of the Oklahoma legislature repudiated President Roosevelt for endorsement of alleged scenes in Oklahoma as shown by a moving picture company, when a request from United States Marshall John Abernathy to put his "Wolfe hunt, bank robbery and Indian massacre" pictures in legislative hall for the edification of the solons. These pictures are the same as were recently shown in the White House at Washington, when President Roosevelt acted as "Spieler" before a select crowd of statesmen and diplomats.

When the Abernathy request was made Representative Faulkner, of Kiowa county, sprang to his feet and declared Oklahoma has had enough notoriety of this character; that the lawlessness of the past was a subject the state was seeking to forget; that manufactured pictures of bank robberies and Indian massacres were not only libelous but an outrage. He objected to the hall being used for such purposes.

His speech brought forth terrific applause.

A motion was made and carried to commit the request to the "Committee on Criminal Jurisprudence."

Some weeks ago at the suggestion of President, John Abernathy, Al Jennings and others, put on a series of wild west "Stunts" before a moving picture apparatus. They first produced their pictures at the White House. Advertising matter regarding their show bears this surprising statement: "Approved by President Roosevelt."

The action of the Oklahoma legislature, therefore, can be considered a slap at the president in return for his willingness to slander Oklahoma before the world.

The effectiveness of the new tax law has been proven already in this, Logan county, where an investigation of the tax levies made is in progress.

Assistant State Examiner Hugh Gerner discovered a fifteen mill tax levy for the town of Langston, ten mills for general purposes, the constitutional limit, and five mills for judgment. One or two school districts were found to have excessive levies. Knowing that the investigation was coming, the County Commissioners met and cut out the levies in several townships.

Scattered over all Oklahoma are special deputy state inspectors looking into the taxation question.

Her captains will hold fort at every corner of Main street and you will be asked to surrender a small sum of money to the cause and you will be tagged to show you are a loyal soldier of the Normal Crusade. THE LAKE CRIB FIRE VICTIMS

Chicago, Jan. 21.—People today are endeavoring to identify parts of bodies taken from the lake crib fire. The remain were put into thirty sacks and are lying at the morgue. It is supposed they contain forty-eight bodies and it is believed some others are at the bottom of the lake. The coroner says some bodies are still in the ruins.

He thinks the dead may total sixty. The coroner will investigate the ruins today.

Witnesses are to be summoned Saturday for the inquest.

The coroner's jury, empaneled before noon today, was taken to the scene of the crib disaster to inspect the ruins. The jury will be lowered into the tunnel so they can see the conditions under which the men worked. Diligent search is being made of the ruins for bodies of the dead which are yet unaccounted for.

Mr. McGuyre has seventy-five Jersey cows to supply the milk and cream necessary for his plant, so the product of the Purity Ice Cream Company will be under his personal supervision from start to finish. The capacity of the plant will be one hundred gallons per day and it will be as fine ice cream as can be made.

Mr. McGuyre will commence operation about February 15th, and in addition to supplying the local demand, he can attend to the wants of a number of outside customers.

It is these industries of Ada that get trade elsewhere that go to make this a central point and will result in its development into a commercial center.

Come and Get the Others.

Some greedy thief entered the chicken house of C. O. Cullins last night and took thirty-two fine Plymouth Rock hens, which he recently paid seventy-five cents each for.

The thief left a rooster and four guineas, which Mr. Cullins desires him to return and get, so as not to be bothered any more.

GREAT MEN OF LAST CENTURY.

Tolstoy Ranks with Napoleon and Abraham Lincoln.

Perhaps the most comprehensive and enlightening of the articles on the great Russian "Lyof N. Tolstoy" which have recently appeared is the article by W. D. Howells in the North American Review. Mr. Howells places the name of Tolstoy among the very greatest of the names of the nineteenth century. "There was," he says, "Napoleon and there was Lincoln, and then there was Tolstoy in an order which time may change, though it appears to me certain that time will not change the number of these supreme names." Mr. Howells continues:

"Since I have set them down here they have suggested to me a sort of representative unity in their relation to one another. If you fancy Napoleon the incarnation of selfish force which inspired and supported his own triumphant enemies in their reaction against progress; if you suppose Lincoln the type of humanity struggling toward the ideal in the regeneration of the world's polity, you may well conceive of Tolstoy as the soul's criticism of the evil and the good which, however wholly or partially they knew it, the others imperfectly did. The work of Lincoln was no more final than the work of Napoleon, and, like Lincoln's, Tolstoy's work has been without finality. So far as I can perceive, it has even been without effect in a civilization which calls itself Christian but which has apparently been no more moved by the human soul as it was in Tolstoy than by the Divine Spirit as it was in Christ. At first, indeed, the world was startled by the spectacle of a man of the highest rank, of a most ancient lineage, of great wealth, of renown in arms and in letters, putting from him fame and ease and honor, and proposing literally to obey the word of God, by making himself as one of the least of the brethren of Christ. It was a very curious sight, a bit dull, rather mad, wholly extraordinary. The world could hardly believe its eyes. It rubbed the sleep of 2,000 years out of them at the sound of this voice crying in the wilderness, this voice that had so charmed it in fable, and bidding it prepare the way of the Lord and make his paths straight. Some tears came into its eyes and some smiles; but after a while its lids fell again and all was as before. The event, one of the greatest in the history of mankind, has been without perceptible effect in civilization."

Laziest Bird on Earth.

Some of the most wonderful birds in the world are to be seen at the London Cage Bird association's annual show, says the Mail, of that city.

Perhaps the most remarkable exhibit of all is a bird described by Mr. Frank Finn, the well known ornithologist, as the laziest bird on earth. This is the Cuban trogon, a feathered idler of true Spanish-American instincts. He will sit patiently under a bough waiting for the ripe fruit to fall into his beak, instead of plucking it for himself. Not even the prospect of taking home a first and special prize to its owner disturbed the placidity of this picturesque winged sluggard. Another remarkable exhibit is the rare hawk-headed parrot of South America. The toucans, which have been aptly described as "beaks with birds behind them," attracted a great deal of attention. The great Himalayan barbet was in his usual bad temper, biting furiously at everybody's fingers.

Three-Story Jump Easy for Cat.

A pan of grease that boiled over caused a fire, a panic among many tenants, and a record-breaking jump of a black cat that was scalded by the hot grease. In 9 James street. Members of the eight families in the house crowded out on the fire escapes and several women would have jumped for safety had they not been restrained.

When the firemen were taking the tenants out of the house over the roof of 7 James street, Mrs. Carbo's black cat leaped from the window of the third floor, landed properly on its feet in the court and dashed off through an alley as if a jump of three stories was an everyday occurrence in its nine lives. After licking the hot grease from its paws the cat came back in the evening and joined the Carbo family.—New York Press.

Forgetful Bear Hunter.

Forgetfulness of that vitally important action when hunting bear—to reload your gun after you have fired—almost cost Ben Welch his life while hunting near here. Welch and Farnham Call were together and Welch wounded a large grizzly. The bear turned and fled and the hunters pursued until the bear stopped, turned about and charged Welch.

Welch waited until the bear was within ten feet of him, then took careful aim and pulled the trigger. No explosion followed—he had forgotten to reload his gun. In another instant the bear would have been on Welch had not a well-aimed shot from Call's gun struck the animal in the brain and ended its life. The bear fell so close to Welch that his paw struck his boots.—Alton Correspondence, Denver Republican.

Surprising Him.

"How conscientious you are!" "What makes you think so?" "You always call the clerk's attention to it when he gives you too much change." "Oh, I do that to see him look shocked at his carelessness and my honesty."

IN JAIL FOR DEBT

AT ONE TIME THERE WERE MANY SUCH IN AMERICA.

Seventy-Five Thousand Unfortunates Annually Deprived of Liberty as Late as the Year 1829—Mostly Owed Small Sums.

In 1829 it was estimated that 75,000 persons were annually imprisoned for debt in the United States, and at that date the practice had been abolished in at least two states, namely, Ohio and Kentucky. In 1830 the estimated number of individuals imprisoned on account of debt was: In Massachusetts, 3,000; in New York, 10,000; in Pennsylvania, 7,000; in Maryland, 3,000, or a total of 23,000 in four states.

The average of the debts for which persons were deprived of their liberty was small—under $50. In the jail at Dedham, Norfolk county, Mass., out of a total of 52 debtors confined within its walls only nine owed more than $50 and 16 owed ten dollars or less.

A local society for the relief of debtors confined for small debts procured the release of 15 persons whose debts added together amounted to only $132, an average of less than nine dollars.

In a jail located at Hudson, N. Y., in the course of the year ended September 29, 1830, a total of 169 persons were committed for debts; of this number 49 were held for "rum debts." In Philadelphia 40 cases were recorded in which the sum total of the debts was only $23.40—an average of less than 60 cents each.

"In one of these cases," quotes the Yale Review, "a man was imprisoned 30 days for a debt of two cents. We observe in an English paper a notice of a widow who is confined in jail in Providence for the unpardonable sin of owing 68 cents."

James Bell, keeper of the debtors' jail in New York, in a document submitted to the state senate stated that in 1816 729 persons were confined to the jail under his control for debts under $25 each. Nearly all of these would, he asserted, have starved except for the bounty of the Humane society. Bell himself was compelled to beg for fuel to keep them from freezing.

He specifically mentions the cases of Dins Lyman, imprisoned for three years for a debt of less than $50, and of George Riley, imprisoned for six years, also for a debt of less than $50. Both of the men were supported while imprisoned by charity. In other states, as Massachusetts and Rhode Island, the creditor was required to provide for the board of the imprisoned debtor. When this was not forthcoming the debtor was discharged.

Ancients Loved Oysters.

That the oyster was in common use by primeval man has been conclusively shown by the discovery in the "kitchen middens" of Denmark of many thousands of oyster shells, showing every evidence of having been artificially opened. In ancient Greece, also, the oyster appears to have been a recognized delicacy, for Dr. Henry Schliemann, the eminent German archaeologist—who, it will be remembered, became an American citizen during the great California gold rush—in his historic search for the ancient and somewhat mythical city of Troy, found many oyster shells in the ruins of the five prehistoric settlements of Hissarlik.

But it was Rome in the height of her power and opulence that, by singling out the oyster as the piece de resistance of the Roman banqueting halls, conferred upon the oyster its just title as one of the most delicious and appetizing foods within the grasp of man.—National Magazine.

The Seagull and the Fisherman.

In the fishing village of Anchnithie, Scotland, you may frequently witness seagulls flying into the houses of the fishermen and partaking of food from their hands. One of these sea birds was in the habit of staying in a fisherman's house all the year 'round except at the breeding season, when it left. Once while the gull was away the fisherman removed his home some three and a half miles from the former place. The fisherman never expected to see his old friend, the gull, again. It was, therefore, much to his astonishment that he beheld one Sunday the sea bird come walking into his new residence with stately steps to resume his old familiarities and household ways.

John D. Rockefeller, testifying in the government's suit against the oil trust in New York, during the intermissions in his evidence talked to the reporters.

Advertising to an old friend, Mr. Rockefeller smiled and took a clipping, yellow with age, from his pocket.

"My old friend didn't believe in the Texas oil fields," said Mr. Rockefeller. "Listen to what a Galveston newspaper said about him at the time:

"The oil fields discovered in our state are excellent in quality and abundant in quantity. Great anxiety is felt for James H. Dash, who said he would drink all the oil found in Texas, for Mr. Dash is a man of honor."

The Answer.

Teacher—So you can't do a simple sum in arithmetic? Now, let me explain to you. Suppose eight of you together had 48 apples, 32 peaches and 16 melons, what would each of you get?

"A stomach ache," replied Johnny.

ABOUT ADVERTISING—NO. 9

The Doctor Whose Patients Hang On

By Herbert Kaufman.

Out in China all things are not topsy turvy. Physicians are paid for keeping people well and when their patients fall ill their weekly salary check is stopped. The Chinese judge a medical man not by the number of years he lives, but by the length of time his clients survive.

An advertising medium must be judged in the same way. The fact that it has age to its credit isn't so important as the age of its advertising patronage. Whenever a newspaper continues to display the store talk of the same establishment year after year, it's a pretty sure sign that the merchant has made money out of that newspaper, because no publication can continue to be a losing investment to its customers over a stretch of time without the fact being discovered. And when a newspaper is able to boast of an honor roll of stores that have continued to appear in its pages for a stretch of decades it has proven its superiority as plainly as a mountain peak which rises above its fellows.

The combination of stability and progress is the strongest virtue that a newspaper can possess. Only the fittest survive—reputation is a difficult thing to get and a harder thing to hold—it takes merit to earn it and character to maintain it. There is a vast difference between fame and notoriety, and just as much difference between a famous newspaper and a notorious one.

Just as a manufacturer is always eager to install his choicest stocks in a store which has earned the respect of the community, just so a retailer should be anxious to insert his name in a newspaper which has earned the respect of its readers. The manufacturer feels that he will receive a square deal from a store which has age to its credit. He can expect as much from a newspaper which is a credit to its age!

The newspaper which outlives the rest does so because it was best fitted to it—had to earn the confidence of its readers—and keep it. It had to be a better newspaper than any other, and better newspapers go to the homes of better buyers. Every bit of its circulation has the element of quality and staying power. And it is the respectable, home-loving element of every community—not the touts and the gamblers—toward which the merchant must look for his business vertebrae—he cannot find buyers unless he uses the newspaper that enters their homes. And when he does enter their homes he must not confuse the sheet that comes in the back gate with the newspaper that is delivered at the front door.

CLOCK FOUND VOICE

GREAT SHOCK THE CAUSE OF REJUVENESCENCE.

Explosion Started Timepiece to Work—Its Efforts Unappreciated by the Tired Master of the House.

It is an old-fashioned, eight-day clock, and it stands on a shelf in the kitchen of the apartment, between the dumb-waiter and the ice chest.

Unused to such humble surroundings, for it had once graced a gentleman's library, the old clock has consistently and steadfastly refused to recognize its plebeian neighbors by striking the hours. A faint click, when the minute hand has completed its circuit, is the only audible indication of the flight of time.

But last Sunday the clock had the most serious shock of its existence, a shock that for a time unbalanced its equilibrium to such an extent that—but the story is progressing too rapidly. The timepiece's mistress had bought, about ten days before, a gallon of cider, delivered to her by the grocer in a heavy glass water bottle. Finding after a time that the cider was fermenting, she took the bottle from the ice chest and set it on the window sill, where it stood safely. And now ensues tragedy.

Some time after nine o'clock on Sunday evening, the silence of the house was broken by a report that might have come from the heaviest of fowling pieces, followed by the crash of glass falling into the court below. An excited rush by a startled family, a whisking on of electric lights, and a kitchen floor deluged with hard cider, and covered with splintered glass, was revealed. The bottle had exploded, breaking two empty milk bottles in its crash, and blowing out the window pane.

No one thought of the old clock, then, but later, when the kitchen floor had been mopped and swept, and the excited and weary family had retired, the aged timepiece's shattered nerves gave way. The calm composure of months was broken. It was midnight. Click went the old clock. And then, one, two, three—on to 12 swept the strokes. Thirteen, 14, 15—was it never going to stop? The mistress of the house turned wearily in her first sleep, and thought she was dreaming. Half an hour later, she roused as the master of the house tiptoed in, stifling irritated mirth.

"I waited till the blamed thing struck 1,002, and then I couldn't stand it any longer. You'll find your apron stuffed into the case to-morrow. Even taking off the pendulum didn't do any good." And then he turned in.

The next morning they speculated over the breakfast toast and coffee as to how many times the old clock would have struck had it been permitted to express all of its pent-up emotion; but it has been haughty and hasn't spoken since.

Equal Pay for Equal Work.

Furthermore, a new commodity in any line has usually to be introduced at a lower price than the standard article commands, even though it be in no way inferior. Women have not sprung full-panoplied into business, and the more efficient must for a time be injured by the others. And another serious handicap is that a woman is rarely a good judge of the value of her work. Time will adjust salaries as it does other values.

In no conceivable way can the "equal pay for equal work" cause be advanced more rapidly than it is being furthered by these women who are making of themselves a second pair of hands and a second brain for their employers. Moreover, they know that for the time they have been in business their progress has been remarkable. The very fact that women are given the business confidence they receive argues well for ultimate fairness, for the average man is inclined to meet courage and determination half-way.—Collier's Weekly.

Time, Not Space.

Mrs. Frink was a trusting soul, and rarely questioned the opinions of others about matters concerning which they were supposed to be informed. One day she came home with a new pair of shoes under her arm. "Got them at Brides," she explained, "and they're the best I ever bought you." "What is so very good about them?" inquired her son, for whom the shoes were intended.

"Why, the salesman said that you could walk farther in them than in any others without getting tired, and I said that you couldn't walk very far just now on account of your knee, you know, and he said that he meant farther for the same distance. So I bought them, and here they are. Save the string, please."

She did not notice the smile on her son's face as he unid the package and he was spared the trouble of explaining.—Youth's Companion.

The Qualifications.

"I want somebody to report a woman's congress," said the managing editor.

"Some one well versed in parliamentary language, I presume?"

"Nope. Some one who understands such terms as passementerie, algrette and the like."—Kansas City Journal.

THE STATE INSTITUTIONS

An Omnibus Bill That Will Provide For Their Location is Being Considered.

Guthrie, Okla., Jan. 21.—New State institutions that the house will recommend are to be reported in an omnibus bill, which the committee began considering tonight. It will be arranged that all delegations here to urge their towns for locations will be heard. The senate committee has held no meeting, although practically all the house bills are duplicated on its calendar.

In the house today Mr. Moore of Washington presented a bill giving Dewey the Northwestern State Normal which insures that it will have the support of Bartlesville hereafter an active candidate for the school.

A contest is brewing between Muskogee and Tahlequah for the same institution. Gov. Haskell favors Tahlequah and recently sent a message to the legislature telling how much the Choctaws would take for their female seminary which could easily be converted into a public institution. Muskogee policy as to a state institution appears to be unsettled. First it wanted the Conners District Agricultural School that went to Warner in the same county. Later representatives came proposing upon recommendation promised from the state department or education to take the state school for the blind now located at Fort Gibson and which is was the policy of the department to move.

The latest announcement is that a delegation will be here urging to cation of the Normal at Muskogee instead of at Tahlequah.

The Cordell bill providing the procedure for probating wills was passed finally by a vote of thirty-five to five.

The Indiana resolution for a bust of Sequoyah in Statute hall at Washington was passed without opposition.

The depositing of all public funds by the state treasurer public land commissioners district township or municipal treasurer in banks guaranteed under the state guaranty fund is required in a bill introduced today by Senator R. E. Penho. The failure of an official to comply with the law is made a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of $200 to $1,000.

The new Roddie banking bill was under consideration for a short time during which the senate showed a disposition to cut several large holes in the measure. Roddie finally got through a motion to rise from committee of the whole in which the bill was being considered to save it from further mutilation. During that time however three amendments to the second section had been put through cutting the minimum capital of banks in towns of less than 1,500 people from $15,000 to $10,000. In cities of 6,000 to 1,000 from $20,000 to $25,000. In cities of over 15,000 from $100,000 to $50,000. Senator Roddie gave notice on all three amendments that he would move to restore the original provisions on third reading.

$300 REWARD FOR PUTNAM'S SLAYER

Prosecuting Attorney Wimbish has received the following copy of the proclamation of Gov. Haskell offering a reward of $300 for Marshal Zeke Putnam's slayer:

OKLAHOMA ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE IN CONVENTION

Guthrie Okla. Jan. 21.—The Oklahoma Anti Saloon League in state convention here today adopted resolutions declaring in favor of the state prohibition law including the dispensary feature passed by the first legislature interpreted by the supreme court of the state and interpreting the recent vote on the dispensary system as not expressing the intention of the voters to repeal the dispensary system but as opposing the extension of the local dispensaries to towns of less than 2,000 people as a constitutional amendment.

The portion of the resolution referring to the dispensary follows:

We stand by our prohibition enforcement law as enacted by the last legislature and recently interpreted by our supreme court. We believe that the vote in the recent election was not a disapproval of the agency system as provided by the constitution in towns of 2,000 population but was an expression of the opposition of the people to amending the constitution so as to extend the system to smaller towns in violation of the conditions of the enabling act. Therefore we are opposed to any legislation that would curtail the right of a citizen to purchase liquors for bona fide medical or scientific purposes as contemplated by the enabling act and in our constitution adopted by the people.

The Anti Saloon League asks for the following amendments to the law. To give local authorities the right to suspend temporarily any officer who is charged with failure to discharge the duties of his office pending a speedy trial of the charges to authorize the governor to appoint a limited number of field marshals with powers of sheriffs to assist local authorities in the enforcement of the law, where their services are required and to provide in each county for a deputy sheriff on a salary to employ an assistant to be paid by the county.

A law enforcement meeting is being held here tonight, Gov. Haskell and Rev. P. A. Baker president of the National Anti-Saloon League delivering the principal addresses.

USE CANNON TO CAP WELL.

Gas Has Been Burning for a Week and Rear Heard for Miles.

Fulsa Okla. Jan. 21.—By using a cannon to shoot off the casing head and then capping the well with an immense iron hood effort will be made to extinguish the fire of the immense Fanchon gas well six miles northwest of Skiatook in the Osage. This well caught fire a week ago and efforts at putting out the blaze has proven unsatisfactory. The roar of the fire can be heard for miles and at night the reflection can be seen for ten miles.

Plowed Up Counterfeit Money.

Fulsa Okla. Jan. 21.—While plowing on his farm near Bishop Walter Smith a young farmer turned up a tea kettle filled with counterfeit dollars dated 1897. It is believed that these coins were made by a gang of counterfeiters which operated in this section of Indian Territory about ten years ago.

STATE CAPITAL LETTER.

Guthrie Okla Jan 21—The lower house of the Oklahoma legislature repudiated President Roosevelt for endorsement of alleged scenes in Oklahoma as shown by a moving picture company when a request from United States Marshall John Abernathy to put his Wolfe hunt bank robbery and Indian massacre pictures in legislative hall for the education of the solons. These pictures are the same as were recently shown in the White House at Washington when President Roosevelt acted as speaker before a select crowd of statesmen and diplomats

When the Abernathy request was made Representative Paulkner of Kiowa county sprang to his feet and declared Oklahoma has had enough notoriety of this character that the lawlessness of the past was a subject the state was seeking to forget that manufactured pictures

GREAT MEN OF LAST CENTURY.

Tolstoy Ranks with Napoleon and Abraham Lincoln.

Perhaps the most comprehensive and enlightening of the articles on the great Russian "Lyot N. Tolstoy" which have recently appeared in the article by W. D. Howells in the North American Review. Mr. Howells places the name of Tolstoy among the very greatest of the names of the nineteenth century. "There was," he says, "Napoleon and there was Lincoln, and then there was Tolstoy in an order which time may change, though it appears to me certain that time will not change the number of these supreme names." Mr. Howells continues:

"Since I have set them down here they have suggested to me a sort of representative unity in their relation to one another. If you fancy Napoleon the incarnation of selfish force which inspired and supported his own triumphant enemies in their reaction against progress; if you suppose Lincoln the type of humanity struggling toward the ideal in the regeneration of the world's polity, you may well conceive of Tolstoy as the soul's criticism of the evil and the good which, however wholly or partially they knew it, the others imperfectly did. The work of Lincoln was no more final than the work of Napoleon, and, like Lincoln's, Tolstoy's work has been without finality. So far as I can perceive, it has even been without effect in a civilization which calls itself Christian but which has apparently been no more moved by the human soul as it was in Tolstoy than by the Divine Spirit as it was in Christ. At first, indeed, the world was startled by the spectacle of a man of the highest rank, of a most ancient lineage, of great wealth, of renown in arms and in letters, putting from him fame and ease and honor, and proposing literally to obey the word of God, by making himself as one of the least of the brethren of Christ. It was a very curious sight, a bit droll, rather mad, wholly extraordinary. The world could hardly believe its eyes. It rubbed the sleep of 2,000 years out of them at the sound of this voice crying in the wilderness, this voice that had so charmed it in fable, and bidding it prepare the way of the Lord and make his paths straight. Some tears came into its eyes and some smiles; but after a while its lids fell again and all was as before. The event, one of the greatest in the history of mankind, has been without perceptible effect in civilization."

Laziest Bird on Earth.
Some of the most wonderful birds in the world are to be seen at the London Cage Bird association's annual show, says the Mail, of that city.

Perhaps the most remarkable exhibit of all is a bird described by Mr. Frank Finn, the well known ornithologist, as the laziest bird on earth. This is the Cuban trogon, a feathered idler of true Spanish-American instincts. He will sit patiently under a bough waiting for the ripe fruit to fall into his beak, instead of plucking it for himself. Not even the prospect of taking home a first and special prize to its owner disturbed the placidity of this picturesque winged sluggard. Another remarkable exhibit is the rare hawk-headed parrot of South America. The toucans, which have been aptly described as "beaks with birds behind them," attracted a great deal of attention. The great Himalayan barbet was in his usual bad temper, biting furiously at everybody's fingers.

Three-Story Jump Easy for Cat.
A pan of grease that boiled over caused a fire, a panic among many tenants, and a record-breaking jump of a black cat that was scalded by the hot grease in 9 James street. Members of the eight families in the house crowded out on the fire escapes and several women would have jumped for safety had they not been restrained.

When the firemen were taking the tenants out of the house over the roof of 7 James street, Mrs. Carbo's black cat leaped from the window of the third floor, landed properly on its feet in the court and dashed off through an alley as if a jump of three stories was an everyday occurrence in its nine lives. After licking the hot grease from its paws the cat came back in the evening and joined the Carbo family.—New York Press.

Forgetful Bear Hunter.
Forgetfulness of that vitally important action when hunting bear—to reload your gun after you have fired—almost cost Ben Welch his life while hunting near here. Welch and Farnham Call were together and Welch wounded a large grizzly. The bear turned and fled and the hunters pursued until the bear stopped, turned about and charged Welch.

Welch waited until the bear was within ten feet of him, then took careful aim and pulled the trigger. No explosion followed—he had forgotten to reload his gun. In another instant the bear would have been on Welch had not a well-aimed shot from Call's gun struck the animal in the brain and ended its life. The bear fell so close to Welch that his paw struck his boots.—Akron Correspondence, Denver Republican.

Surprising Him.
"How conscientious you are!" "What makes you think so?" "You always call the clerk's attention to it when he gives you too much change." "Oh, I do that to see him look shocked at his carelessness and my honesty."

IN JAIL FOR DEBT

AT ONE TIME THERE WERE MANY SUCH IN AMERICA.

Seventy-Five Thousand Unfortunates Annually Deprived of Liberty as Late as the Year 1829—Mostly Owed Small Sums.

In 1829 it was estimated that 75,000 persons were annually imprisoned for debt in the United States, and at that date the practice had been abolished in at least two states, namely, Ohio and Kentucky. In 1830 the estimated number of individuals imprisoned on account of debt was: In Massachusetts, 3,000; in New York, 10,000; in Pennsylvania, 7,000; in Maryland, 3,000, or a total of 23,000 in four states.

The average of the debts for which persons were deprived of their liberty was small—under $50. In the jail at Dedham, Norfolk county, Mass., out of a total of 52 debtors confined within its walls only nine owed more than $50 and 16 owed ten dollars or less.

A local society for the relief of debtors confined for small debts procured the release of 15 persons whose debts added together amounted to only $132, an average of less than nine dollars.

In a jail located at Hudson, N. Y., in the course of the year ended September 29, 1830, a total of 169 persons were committed for debts, of this number 49 were held for "rum debts." In Philadelphia 40 cases were recorded in which the sum total of the debts was only $23.40—an average of less than 60 cents each.

"In one of these cases," quotes the Yale Review, "a man was imprisoned 30 days for a debt of two cents. We observe in an English paper a notice of a widow who is confined in jail in Providence for the unpardonable sin of owing 63 cents."

James Bell, keeper of the debtors' jail in New York, in a document submitted to the state senate stated that in 1816 729 persons were confined to the jail under his control for debts under $25 each. Nearly all of these would, he asserted, have starved except for the bounty of the humane society. Bell himself was compelled to beg for fuel to keep them from freezing.

He specifically mentions the cases of Dins Lyman, imprisoned for three years for a debt of less than $50, and of George Riley, imprisoned for six years, also for a debt of less than $50. Both of the men were supported while imprisoned by charity. In other states, as Massachusetts and Rhode Island, the creditor was required to provide for the board of the imprisoned debtor. When this was not forthcoming the debtor was discharged.

Ancients Loved Oysters.

That the oyster was in common use by primeval man has been conclusively shown by the discovery in the "kitchen middens" of Denmark of many thousands of oyster shells, showing every evidence of having been artificially opened. In ancient Greece, also, the oyster appears to have been a recognized delicacy. For Dr. Henry Schliemann, the eminent German archaeologist—who, it will be remembered, became an American citizen during the great California gold rush—in his historic search for the ancient and somewhat mythical city of Troy, found many oyster shells in the ruins of the five prehistoric settlements of Hissarlik.

But it was Rome in the height of her power and opulence that, by singling out the oyster as the piece de resistance of the Roman banqueting halls, conferred upon the oyster its just title as one of the most delicious and appetizing foods within the grasp of man.—National Magazine

The Seagull and the Fisherman. In the fishing village of Anghimithie, Scotland, you may frequently witness seagulls flying into the houses of the fishermen and partaking of food from their hands. One of these sea birds was in the habit of staying in a fisherman's house all the year round except at the breeding season, when it left. Once while the gull was away the fisherman removed his home some three and a half miles from the former place. The fisherman never expected to see his old friend, the gull, again. It was, therefore, much to his astonishment that he beheld one Sunday the sea bird come walking into his new residence with stately steps to resume his old familiarities and household ways.

A Big Drink. John D. Rockefeller, testifying in the government's suit against the oil trust in New York, during the interrogations in his evidence talked to the reporters.

Adverting to an old friend, Mr. Rockefeller smiled and took a clipping, yellow with age, from his pocket. "My old friend didn't believe in the Texas oil fields," said Mr. Rockefeller. "Listen to what a Galveston newspaper said about him at the time:

"The oil fields discovered in our state are excellent in quality and abundant in quantity. Great anxiety is felt for James H. Dash, who said he would drink all the oil found in Texas, for Mr. Dash is a man of honor."

The Answer.

Teacher—So you can't do a simple sum in arithmetic? Now, let me explain to you. Suppose eight of you together had 48 apples, 32 peaches and 16 melons, what would each of you get?

"A stomach ache," replied Johnny.

ABOUT ADVERTISING—NO. 9.

The Doctor Whose Patients Hang On

By Herbert Kaufman.

Out in China all things are not topsy turvy. Physicians are paid for keeping people well and when their patients fall ill their weekly salary check is stopped. The Chinese judge a medical man not by the number of years he lives, but by the length of time his clients survive.

An advertising medium must be judged in the same way. The fact that it has age to its credit isn't so important as the age of its advertising patronage. Whenever a newspaper continues to display the store talk of the same establishment year after year, it's a pretty sure sign that the merchant has made money out of that newspaper, because no publication can continue to be a losing investment to its customers over a stretch of time without the fact being discovered. And when a newspaper is able to boast of an honor roll of stores that have continued to appear in its pages for a stretch of decades it has proven its superiority as plainly as a mountain peak which rises above its fellows.

The combination of stability and progress is the strongest virtue that a newspaper can possess. Only the fit survive—reputation is a difficult thing to get and a harder thing to hold—it takes merit to earn it and character to maintain it. There is a vast difference between fame and notoriety, and just as much difference between a famous newspaper and a notorious one.

Just as a manufacturer is always eager to install his choicest stocks in a store which has earned the respect of the community, just so a retailer should be anxious to insert his name in a newspaper which has earned the respect of its readers. The manufacturer feels that he will receive a square deal from a store which has age to its credit. He can expect as much from a newspaper which is a credit to its age!

The newspaper which outlives the rest does so because it was best fitted to—it had to earn the confidence of its readers—and keep it. It had to be a better newspaper than any other, and better newspapers go to the homes of better buyers. Every bit of its circulation has the element of quality and staying power. And it is the respectable, home-loving element of every community—not the touts and the gamblers—toward which the merchant must look for his business vertebrae—he cannot find buyers unless he uses the newspaper that enters their homes. And when he does enter their homes he must not confuse the sheet that comes in the back gate with the newspaper that is delivered at the front door.

CLOCK FOUND VOICE

GREAT SHOCK: THE CAUSE OF REJUVENESCENCE.

Explosion Started Timepiece to Work—Its Efforts Unappreciated by the Tired Master of the House.

It is an old-fashioned, eight-day clock, and it stands on a shelf in the kitchen of the apartment, between the dumb-waiter and the ice chest.

Unused to such humble surroundings, for it had once graced a gentleman's library, the old clock has consistently and steadfastly refused to recognize its plebeian neighbors by striking the hours. A faint click, when the minute hand has completed its circuit, is the only audible indication of the flight of time.

But last Sunday the clock had the most serious shock of its existence, a shock that for a time unbalanced its equilibrium to such an extent that—but the story is progressing too rapidly. The timepiece's mistress had bought, about ten days before, a gallon of cider, delivered to her by the grocer in a heavy glass water bottle. Finding after a time that the cider was fermenting, she took the bottle from the ice chest and set it on the window sill, where it stood safely. And now ensues tragedy.

Some time after nine o'clock on Sunday evening, the silence of the house was broken by a report that might have come from the heaviest of fowling pieces, followed by the crash of glass falling into the court below. An excited rush by a startled family, a whisking on of electric lights, and a kitchen floor deluged with hard cider, and covered with splintered glass, was revealed. The bottle had exploded, breaking two empty milk bottles in its crash, and blowing out the window pane.

No one thought of the old clock, then, but later, when the kitchen floor had been mopped, and swept, and the excited and weary family had retired, the aged timepiece's shattered nerves gave way. The calm composure of months was broken. It was midnight. Click went the old clock. And then, one, two, three—on to 12 went the strokes. Thirteen, 14, 15—was it never going to stop? The mistress of the house turned wearily in her first sleep, and thought she was dreaming. Half an hour later, she roused as the master of the house tiptoed in, stiflingly initiated mirth.

"I waited till the blamed thing struck 1,002, and then I couldn't stand it any longer. You'll find your apron stuffed into the case to-morrow. Even taking off the pendulum didn't do any good." And then he turned in.

"The next morning they speculated over the breakfast toast and coffee as to how many times the old clock would have struck had it been permitted to express all of its pent-up emotion, but it has been haughty and hasn't spoken since.

Equal Pay for Equal Work.

Furthermore, a new commodity in any line has usually to be introduced at a lower price than the standard article commands, even though it be in no way inferior. Women have not sprung full-panoplied into business, and the more efficient must for a time be injured by the others. And another serious handicap is that a woman is rarely a good judge of the value of her work. Time will adjust salaries as it does other values.

In no conceivable way can the "equal pay for equal work" cause be advanced more rapidly than it is being furthered by these women who are making of themselves a second pair of hands and a second brain for their employers. Moreover, they know that for the time they have been in business their progress has been remarkable. The very fact that women are given the business confidence they receive argues well for ultimate fairness, for the average man is inclined to meet courage and determination halfway.—Collier's Weekly.

Time, Not Space.

Mrs. Frink was a trusting soul, and rarely questioned the opinions of others about matters concerning which they were supposed to be informed. One day she came home with a new pair of shoes under her arm. "Got them at Brides," she explained, "and they're the best I ever bought you."

"What is so very good about them?" inquired her son, for whom the shoes were intended.

"Why, the salesman said that you could walk farther in them than in any others without getting tired, and I said that you couldn't walk very far just now on account of your knee, you know, and he said that he meant farther for the same distance. So I bought them, and here they are. Save the string, please."

She did not notice the smile on her son's face as he undid the package and he was spared the trouble of explaining.—Youth's Companion.

The Qualifications.

"I want somebody to report a woman's congress," said the managing editor.

"Some one well versed in parliamentary language, I presume?"

"Nope. Some one who understands such terms as passementerie, aligrette and the like."—Kansas City Journal.

The Victim of Fate.

THE STATE INSTITUTIONS

An Omnibus Bill That Will Provide For Their Location is Being Considered.

Guthrie, Okla., Jan. 21.—New State institutions that the house will recommend are to be reported in an omnibus bill, which the committee began considering tonight. It will be arranged that all delegations here to urge their towns for locations will be heard. The senate committee has held no meeting, although practically all the house bills are duplicated on its calendar.

In the house today Mr. Moore of Washington presented a bill giving Dewey the Northwestern State Normal which insures that it will have the support of Bartlesville heretofore an active candidate for the school.

A contest is brewing between Muskogee and Tahlequah for the same institution. Gov. Haskell favors Tahlequah and recently sent a message to the legislature telling how much the Cheatees would take for their female seminary which could easily be converted into a public institution. Muskogee policy as to a state institution appears to be unsettled. First it wanted the Central District Agricultural School that went to Warner in the same county. Later representatives came proposing upon recommendation promised from the state department or education to take the state school for the blind now located at Fort Gibson and which is the policy of the department to move.

The latest announcement is that a delegation will be here urging location of the Normal at Muskogee instead of at Tahlequah.

The Cordell bill providing the procedure for probating wills was passed finally by a vote of thirty-five to nine.

The Indiana resolution for a bust of Sequoyia in Statuary hall at Washington was passed without opposition.

The depositing of all public funds by the state treasurer, public land commissioners, district township or municipal treasurer in banks guaranteed under the state guarantee fund is required in a bill introduced today by Senator R. D. Nichols. The bill is made a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of $200 to $1,000.

The new Roddie banking bill was under consideration for a short time during which the senate showed a disposition to cut several large holes in the measure. Roddie finally got through a motion to rise from committee of the whole in which the bill was being considered to save it from further mutilation. During that time however three amendments to the second section had been put through cutting the minimum capital of banks in towns of less than 1,500 people from $15,000 to $10,000 in cities of 6,000 to 10,000 from $50,000 to $25,000 in cities of over 15,000 from $100,000 to $50,000. Senator Roddie gave notice on all three amendments that he would move to restore the original provisions on third reading.

and Rev. P. A. Baker president of the National Anti-Saloon League delivering the principal addresses.

MRS. OLIVE WHITTAKER DIES

Oklahoma City Jan. 21.—Linger between life and death for more than two months Mrs. Olive Whitaker who was shot down at Second and Robinson streets November 22 by her husband Grover C. Whitaker died at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon at her cottage 420 West Noble street.

Whitaker who is out on a $7,500 bond had not been located by the authorities. A report was received late last night stating he had been seen leaving town going south and that he was bound for Ardmore where he has relatives.

Immediately after receiving information that Mrs. Whitaker was dead County Attorney Readon swore out a warrant in Justice E. D. Oldfield's court charging Whitaker with murder. Officers throughout the city were notified to be on the lookout for him but at a late hour last night he had not been arrested.

John Lane charged originally with aiding and abetting in the escape of Grover C. Whitaker after the shooting of Mrs. Whitaker was re-arrested last night on a new warrant charging him with being a principal in what is now termed the murder of Mrs. Whitaker.

ADA PROHIBITION DELEGATION

Mrs. J. H. Howerton, Rev. W. M. Wilson, R. E. Haynes and R. O. Wheeler the Ada delegation who attended the State Anti-Saloon League meeting at Guthrie on Thursday returned home today.

They first met with about 3,000 citizens in Oklahoma City Wednesday night at the White Temple and heard a fine talk by State Lecturer Baker.

At the meeting in Guthrie there was a large attendance of prohibitionists from all over the state and there was much enthusiasm.

OKLAHOMA ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE IN CONVENTION

Guthrie Okla. Jan. 21.—The Oklahoma Anti-Saloon League in state convention here today adopted resolutions declaring in favor of the state prohibition law including the dispensary feature passed by the first legislature interpreted by the supreme court of the state and in interpreting the recent vote on the dispensary system as not expressing the intention of the voters to repeal the dispensary system but as opposing the extension of the local dispensaries to towns of less than 2,000 people as a constitutional amendment.

The portion of the resolution referring to the dispensary follows:

We stand by our prohibition enforcement law as enacted by the last legislature and recently interpreted by our supreme court. We believe that the vote in the recent election was not a disapproval of the agency system as provided by the constitution in towns of 2,000 population but was an expression of the opposition of the people to amending the constitution so as to extend the system to smaller towns in violation of the conditions of the enabling act. Therefore we are opposed to any legislation that would curtail the right of a citizen to purchase liquors for bona fide medical or scientific purposes as contemplated by the enabling act and in our constitution adopted by the people.

The Anti-Saloon League asks for the following amendments to the law. To give local authorities the right to suspend temporarily any officer who is charged with failure to discharge the duties of his office pending a speedy trial of the charges to authorize the governor to appoint a limited number of field marshals with powers of sheriffs to assist local authorities in the enforcement of the law, where their services are required and to provide in each county for a deputy sheriff on a salary to authorize county attorneys to employ an assistant to be paid by the county.

A law enforcement meeting is being held here tonight, Gov. Haskell

Guthrie Okla Jan 21—The lower house of the Oklahoma legislature repudiated President Roosevelt for endorsement of alleged scenes in Oklahoma as shown by a moving picture company when a request from United States Marshall John Abernathy to put his Wolfe Hunt bank robbery and Indian massacre pictures in legislative hall for the education of the solons These pictures are the same as were recently shown in the White House at Washington when President Roosevelt acted as Spieler before a select crowd of statesmen and diplomats

When the Abernathy request was made Representative Paulkner of Kiowa county sprang to his feet and declared Oklahoma has had enough notoriety of this character that the lawlessness of the past was a subject the state was seeking to forget that manufactured pictures

Purity Ice Cream Company.
R. L. McGuyre the dairyman, has bought the ice cream plant from W. H. Parks, and will install it in a new building near the Ada Ice and Fuel Company. The machinery will be added to and everything overhauled and renovated.

Mr. McGuyre has seventy-five Jersey cows to supply the milk and cream necessary for his plant, so the product of the Purity Ice Cream Company will be under his personal supervision from start to finish. The capacity of the plant will be one hundred gallons per day and it will be as fine ice cream as can be made. Mr. McGuyre will commence operation about February 15th, and in addition to supplying the local demand, he can attend to the wants of a number of outside customers. It is these industries of Ada that get trade elsewhere that go to make this a central point and will result in its development into a commercial center.

Come and Get the Others.
Some greedy thief entered the chicken house of C. O. Cullins last night and took thirty-two fine Plymouth Rock hens, which he recently paid seventy-five cents each for. The thief left a rooster and four guineas, which Mr. Cullins desires him to return and get, so as not to be bothered any more.

GREAT MEN OF LAST CENTURY.

Tolstoy Ranks with Napoleon and Abraham Lincoln.

Perhaps the most comprehensive and enlightening of the articles on the great Russian, "Lyof. N. Tolstoy" which have recently appeared in the article by W. D. Howells in the North American Review. Mr. Howells places the name of Tolstoy among the very greatest of the names of the nineteenth century. "There was," he says, "Napoleon and there was Lincoln, and then there was Tolstoy in an order which time may change, though it appears to me certain that time will not change the number of those supreme names." Mr. Howells continues:

"Since I have set them down here they have suggested to me a sort of representative unity in their relation to one another. If you fancy Napoleon the incarnation of selfish force which inspired and supported his own triumphant enemies in their reaction against progress; if you suppose Lincoln the type of humanity struggling toward the ideal in the regeneration of the world's polity, you may well conceive of Tolstoy as the soul's criticism of the evil and the good which, however wholly or partially they knew it, the others imperfectly did. The work of Lincoln was no more final than the work of Napoleon, and, like Lincoln's, Tolstoy's work has been without finality. So far as I can perceive, it has even been without effect in a civilization which calls itself Christian but which has apparently been no more moved by the human soul as it was in Tolstoy than by the Divine Spirit as it was in Christ. At first, indeed, the world was startled by the spectacle of a man of the highest rank, of a most ancient lineage, of great wealth, of renown in arms and in letters, putting from him fame and ease and honor, and proposing literally to obey the word of God, by making himself as one of the least of the brethren of Christ. It was a very curious sight, a bit droll, rather mad, wholly extraordinary. The world could hardly believe its eyes. It rubbed the sleep of 2,000 years out of them at the sound of this voice crying in the wilderness, this voice that had so charmed it in fable, and bidding it prepare the way of the Lord and make his paths straight. Some tears came into its eyes and some smiles; but after a while its lids fell again and all was as before. The event, one of the greatest in the history of mankind, has been without perceptible effect in civilization."

Laziest Bird on Earth.

Some of the most wonderful birds in the world are to be seen at the London Cage Bird association's annual show, says the Mail, of that city.

Perhaps the most remarkable exhibit of all is a bird described by Mr. Frank Finn, the well known ornithologist, as the laziest bird on earth. This is the Cuban trogon, a feathered idler of true Spanish-American instincts. He will sit patiently under a bough waiting for the ripe fruit to fall into his beak, instead of plucking it for himself. Not even the prospect of taking home a first and special prize to its owner disturbed the placidity of this picturesque winged sluggard. Another remarkable exhibit is the rare hawk-headed parrot of South America. The toucans, which have been aptly described as "beaks with birds behind them," attracted a great deal of attention. The great Himalayan harrier was in his usual bad temper, biting furiously at everybody's fingers.

Three-Story Jump Easy for Cat.

A pan of grease that boiled over caused a fire, a panic among many tenants, and a record-breaking jump of a black cat that was scolded by the hot grease in 9 James street. Members of the eight families in the house crowded out on the fire escapes and several women would have jumped for safety had they not been restrained.

When the firemen were taking the tenants out of the house over the roof of 7 James street, Mrs. Carbo's black cat leaped from the window of the third floor, landed properly on its feet in the court and dashed off through an alley as if a jump of three stories was an everyday occurrence in its nine lives. After licking the hot grease from its paws the cat came back in the evening and joined the Carbo family.—New York Press.

Forgetful Bear Hunter.

Forgetfulness of that vitally important action when hunting bear—to reload your gun after you have fired—almost cost Ben Welch his life while hunting near here. Welch and Farnham Call were together and Welch wounded a large grizzly. The bear turned and fled and the hunters pursued until the bear stopped, turned about and charged Welch.

Welch waited until the bear was within ten feet of him, then took careful aim and pulled the trigger. No explosion followed—he had forgotten to reload his gun. In another instant the bear would have been on Welch had not a well-aimed shot from Call's gun struck the animal in the brain and ended its life. The bear fell so close to Welch that his paw struck his boots.—Alton Correspondence, Denver Republican.

Surprising Him.

"How conscientious you are!" "What makes you think so?" "You always call the clerk's attention to it when he gives you too much change." "Oh, I do that to see him look shocked at his carelessness and my honesty."

IN JAIL FOR DEBT

AT ONE TIME THERE WERE MANY SUCH IN AMERICA.

Seventy-Five Thousand Unfortunates Annually Deprived of Liberty as Late as the Year 1829—Mostly Owed Small Sums.

In 1829 it was estimated that 75,000 persons were annually imprisoned for debt in the United States, and at that date the practice had been abolished in at least two states, namely, Ohio and Kentucky. In 1830 the estimated number of individuals imprisoned on account of debt was: In Massachusetts, 2,000; in New York, 10,000; in Pennsylvania, 7,000; in Maryland, 3,000, or a total of 22,000 in four states.

The average of the debts for which persons were deprived of their liberty was small—under $50. In the jail at Dedham, Norfolk county, Mass., out of a total of 52 debtors confined within its walls only nine owed more than $50 and 18 owed ten dollars or less.

A local society for the relief of debtors confined for small debts procured the release of 15 persons whose debts added together amounted to only $132, an average of less than nine dollars.

In a jail located at Hudson, N. Y., in the course of the year ended September 29, 1830, a total of 169 persons were committed for debts, of this number 49 were held for "run debts." In Philadelphia 40 cases were recorded in which the sum total of the debts was only $33.40—an average of less than 80 cents each.

"In one of these cases," quotes the Yale Review, "a man was imprisoned 30 days for a debt of two cents. We observe in an English paper a notice of a widow who is confined in jail in Providence for the unpardonable sin of owing 68 cents."

James Bell, keeper of the debtors' jail in New York, in a document submitted to the state senate stated that in 1816 729 persons were confined to the jail under his control for debts under $25 each. Nearly all of these would, he asserted, have stayed except for the bounty of the humane society. Bell himself was compelled to beg for fuel to keep them from freezing.

He specifically mentions the cases of Dins Lyman, imprisoned for three years for a debt of less than $50, and of George Riley, imprisoned for six years, also for a debt of less than $50. Both of the men were supported while imprisoned by charity. In other states, as Massachusetts and Rhode Island, the creditor was required to provide for the board of the imprisoned debtor. When this was not forthcoming the debtor was discharged.

Ancients Loved Oysters.

That the oyster was in common use by primeval man has been conclusively shown by the discovery in the "kitchen middens" of Denmark of many thousands of oyster shells, showing every evidence of having been artificially opened. In ancient Greece, also, the oyster appears to have been a recognized delicacy, for Dr. Henry Schliemann, the eminent German archaeologist—who, it will be remembered became an American citizen during the great California gold rush—in his historic search for the ancient and somewhat mythical city of Troy, found many oyster shells in the ruins of the five prehistoric settlements of Hissarlik.

But it was Rome in the height of her power and opulence that, by singling out the oyster as the piece de resistance of the Roman banqueting halls, conferred upon the oyster its just title as one of the most delicious and appetizing foods within the grasp of man.—National Magazine

The Seagull and the Fisherman.

In the fishing village of Auchmiltie, Scotland, you may frequently witness seagulls flying into the houses of the fishermen and partaking of food from their hands. One of these sea birds was in the habit of staying in a fisherman's house all the year round except at the breeding season, when it left. Once while the gull was away the fisherman removed his home some three and a half miles from the former place. The fisherman never expected to see his old friend, the gull, again. It was, therefore, much to his astonishment that he beheld one Sunday the sea bird come walking into his new residence with stately steps to resume his old familiarities and household ways.

John D. Rockefeller, testifying in the government's suit against the oil trust in New York, during the interrogations in his evidence talked to the reporters.

Advertising to an old friend, Mr. Rockefeller smiled and took a chipping, yellow with age, from his pocket. "My old friend didn't believe in the Texas oil fields," said Mr. Rockefeller. "Listen to what a Galveston newspaper said about him at the time:

"The oil fields discovered in our state are excellent in quality and abundant in quantity. Great anxiety is felt for James H. Dash, who said he would drink all the oil found in Texas, for Mr. Dash is a man of honor."

The Answer.

Teacher—So you can't do a simple sum in arithmetic? Now, let me explain to you. Suppose eight of you together had 48 apples, 32 peaches and 16 melons, what would each of you get?

"A stomach ache," replied Johnny.

ABOUT ADVERTISING—NO. 9.

The Doctor Whose Patients Hang On

By Herbert Kaufman.

Out in China all things are not topsy turvy. Physicians are paid for keeping people well and when their patients fall ill their weekly salary check is stopped. The Chinese judge a medical man not by the number of years he lives, but by the length of time his clients survive.

An advertising medium must be judged in the same way. The fact that it has age to its credit isn't so important as the age of its advertising patronage. Whenever a newspaper continues to display the store talk of the same establishment year after year, it's a pretty sure sign that the merchant has made money out of that newspaper, because no publication can continue to be a losing investment to its customers over a stretch of time without the fact being discovered. And when a newspaper is able to boast of an honor roll of stores that have continued to appear in its pages for a stretch of decades it has proven its superiority as plainly as a mountain peak which rises above its fellows.

The combination of stability and progress is the strongest virtue that a newspaper can possess. Only the fit survive—reputation is a difficult thing to get and a harder thing to hold—it takes merit to earn it and character to maintain it. There is a vast difference between fame and notoriety, and just as much difference between a famous newspaper and a notorious one.

Just as a manufacturer is always eager to install his choicest stocks in a store which has earned the respect of the community, just so a retailer should be anxious to insert his name in a newspaper which has earned the respect of its readers. The manufacturer feels that he will receive a square deal from a store which has age to its credit. He can expect as much from a newspaper which is a credit to its age!

The newspaper which outlives the rest does so because it was best fitted to—it had to earn the confidence of its readers—and keep it. It had to be a better newspaper than any other, and better newspapers go to the homes of better buyers. Every bit of its circulation has the element of quality and staying power. And it is the respectable, home-loving element of every community—not the touts and the gamblers—toward which the merchant must look for his business vertebrae—he cannot find buyers unless he uses the newspaper that enters their homes. And when he does enter their homes he must not confuse the sheet that comes in the back gate with the newspaper that is delivered at the front door.

CLOCK FOUND VOICE

GREAT SHOCK, THE CAUSE OF REJUVENESCENCE.

Explosion Startled Timepiece to Work—Its Efforts Unappreciated by the Tired Master of the House.

It is an old-fashioned, eight-day clock, and it stands on a shelf in the kitchen of the apartment, between the dumb-waiter and the ice chest.

Caused to such humble surroundings, for it had once graced a gentleman's library, the old clock has consistently and steadfastly refused to recognize its plebeian neighbors by striking the hours. A faint click, when the minute hand has completed its circuit, is the only audible indication of the flight of time.

But last Sunday the clock had the most serious shock of its existence, a shock that for a time unbalanced its equilibrium to such an extent that—but the story is progressing too rapidly. The timepiece's mistress had bought, about ten days before, a gallon of cider, delivered to her by the grocer in a heavy glass water bottle. Finding after a time that the cider was fermenting, she took the bottle from the ice chest and set it on the window sill, where it stood safely. And now ensues tragedy.

Some time after nine o'clock on Sunday evening, the silence of the house was broken by a report that might have come from the heaviest of fowling pieces, followed by the crash of glass falling into the court below. An excited rush by a startled family, a whisking on of electric lights, and a kitchen floor deluged with hard cider, and covered with splintered glass, was revealed. The bottle had exploded, breaking two empty milk bottles in its crash, and blowing out the window pane.

No one thought of the old clock, then, but later, when the kitchen floor had been mopped and swept, and the excited and weary family had retired, the aged timepiece's shattered nerves gave way. The calm composure of months was broken. It was midnight. Click went the old clock. And then, one, two, three—on to 12 went the strokes. Thirteen, 14, 15—was it never going to stop? The mistress of the house turned wearily in her first sleep, and thought she was dreaming. Half an hour later, she roused as the master of the house tiptoed in, stifling irritated mirth.

"I waited till the blamed thing struck 1,002, and then I couldn't stand it any longer. You'll find your apron stuffed into the case to-morrow. Even taking off the pendulum didn't do any good." And then he turned in.

The next morning they speculated over the breakfast roast and coffee as to how many times the old clock would have struck had it been permitted to express all of its pent-up emotion, but it has been haughty and hasn't spoken since.

Equal Pay for Equal Work.

Furthermore, a new commodity in any line has usually to be introduced at a lower price than the standard article commands, even though it be in no way inferior. Women have not sprung full-panoplied into business, and the more efficient must for a time be injured by the others. And another serious handicap is that a woman is rarely a good judge of the value of her work. Time will adjust salaries as it does other values.

In no conceivable way can the "equal pay for equal work" cause be advanced more rapidly than it is being furthered by these women who are making of themselves a second pair of hands and a second brain for their employers. Moreover, they know that for the time they have been in business their progress has been remarkable. The very fact that women are given the business confidence they receive argues well for ultimate fairness, for the average man is inclined to meet courage and determination halfway.—Collier's Weekly.

Time, Not Space.

Mrs. Frink was a trusting soul, and rarely questioned the opinions of others about matters concerning which they were supposed to be informed. One day she came home with a new pair of shoes under her arm. "Got them at Brides'," she explained, "and they're the best I ever bought you."

"What is so very good about them?" Inquired her son, for whom the shoes were intended.

"Why, the salesman said that you could walk farther in them than in any others without getting tired, and I said that you couldn't walk very far just now on account of your knee, you know, and he said that he meant farther for the same distance. So I bought them, and here they are. Save the string, please."

She did not notice the smile on her son's face as he undid the package and he was spared the trouble of explaining.—Youth's Companion.

The Qualifications.

"I want somebody to report a woman's congress," said the managing editor.

"Some one well versed in parliamentary language, I presume?"

"Nope. Some one who understands such terms as passementerie, aligrette and the like."—Kansas City Journal.

The Victim of Fate.

Williams—I understand that your son has married a widow?

Walters—Well, yes—but I should n't put it that way. She married him.
